Irbid

Irbid with its 500,000 inhabitants is the second-largest city in Jordan, located in the north of the country, approximately 90 km (60 mi) from Amman. The surrounding hills of northern Jordan are responsible for its very temperate climate during the summer months when it is several degrees cooler than Amman and enjoys cool breezes.

Unlike Amman, Irbid is not exposed to many foreigners; it is neither the site of international corporations nor of specific tourist attractions. Hence, its society has retained a very Muslim-Arab flair, and English is not often heard on the streets.

Jordan University of Science and Technology (JUST), where the program takes place, is located a few miles outside of Irbid itself, on the main highway from ar-Ramtha to Amman. It is one of the most prestigious universities in the entire Middle East and ranked number 1 in Jordan.

Even though Irbid does not possess historic sites of its own, it offers easy access to many of the important historical and archaeological sites of Jordan, such as Amman, Jerash, Umm Qais, the Dead Sea, the Jordan Valley, Petra, and Aqaba. Students will have ample opportunities to visit these and other places of interest during their stay.

The Language Center

One of the primary goals of this Program is to completely immerse the participants in the Arabic language. As mentioned above, Irbid provides an ideal setting for language immersion due to its Arab-Muslim society and due to the fact that there are only a minimal number of people who use English—or the Arabic-English mixture often encountered in Amman—but rather speak exclusively Arabic.

Program

The Summer Study Abroad program at Jordan University of science and Technology (JUST) provides a combination of activities for the participants, joining intensive language instruction by native-speaking faculty of the university with Program-sponsored educational excursions as well as many opportunities to explore the country and its people on weekends or at the end of the program.
